

A detailed map of Kentucky, showing all 120 counties. Each county is labeled with its name in all caps. The counties are color-coded in a repeating pattern of light blue, light green, light orange, and light pink. Major cities are marked with black dots and labeled with their names. The map also shows the state's borders with Illinois to the west, Indiana to the north, and Virginia to the east. The Mississippi River is shown flowing through the western part of the state.
